Description: The MA in Humanities and Sciences (MAHS) Program is designed for students whose interests span traditional academic disciplines and who seek to integrate knowledge at the level of both method and content. The program further seeks to foster an ongoing personal and social praxis in which action challenges existing theory and is, in turn, informed and guided by it. The distinguishing characteristics for students who are successful in the program are an active imagination and a passion for understanding, articulating, and creating a more integrated understanding of the world and human activity, while respecting the insights and achievements that are codified in humanistic and scientific knowledge and methods of discovery.
